

NEET Spotlight on Shinichi Haku

NEETpride Magazine

A
NEET
ASSASSIN

!?
* *

September 2022
Volume #2

Table of Contents

1.....Table of Contents

2.....The Trials & Tribulations of a Schizoaffective NEET

4.....NEET Spotlight: Shinichi Haku

8.....A NEET's LeanFIRE Strategy

10.....NEET Assassin Shocks the World!

12.....BuT hOw WiLl We PaY fOr It?

14.....Remove Work From Your Vocabulary

15.....Who Is the Mascot of NEETdom?

18.....The 8fold Path of the Comfy NEET: HD Remaster

23.....NEET Poetry

25.....Why ChristCuckery is Anathema for Men & NEETs

26.....On the Basedness of Online Grocery Shopping

27.....NEET Classifieds

anonymous contributor

anonymous contributor

Tony Wilder

Shinichi Haku

Shinichi Haku

Editor's Note: Second issue outta the gate and already we got a few contributors. A bit later than I expected to release it but none worse for wear. This publication is for promoting and defining the rapidly growing sub-culture known as NEET. This isn't a public protest for better working conditions or a way to cope with being unemployed. If you hate being a NEET, you're more than free to stick around. But the truth is this is for people who love being a NEET and are proud to not be in gainful employment, paid education, or mandatory training. Employment, education, and training are necessary evils at best and extortionary scams at worst. There is no pride or fulfillment to be found in doing things you hate for money, or worse, paying some institution to receive some certificate. So long as your basic needs on Maslow's hierarchy are being met, money is nothing more than a technological crutch for people who can't find happiness any other way.

You can leave feedback with a poll this time. No NEET Comics this issue, sorry! NEET cartoonists and artists, I still need your help! Get in touch with me at: <https://neetpride.wordpress.com/contact/>

I thought getting a Job will do me favors but it hasn't. Sure I have money but I barely have much energy or time to do anything. Everything feels boring and tiresome. So I just sleep all day instead.

The Trials & Tribulations of a Schizoaffective NEET

This piece came to me from a NEET who went to NEET bootcamp, better known as being homeless. This is his story in his own words.

It was a sultry summer day when my parents gave me the ultimatum every NEET fears and every NEET eventually faces; get a job or get out! I wasn't about to be cucked by anyone, not in the least by two fags who decided to have sex one day and now think it's fine to boss me around or whatever. It's like, I'm not your property to be pushed around, I didn't ask to be born, you gave me life and it's your responsibility to uphold that life till the end of your days. That's the contract you sign when you have a child, period. I did what any proud NEET would do in that situation; took all my stuff and went into a neighboring country that was teeming with tourists at the time. The latter will become important later in the story.

My mother wept; asking me to stay but my father was stolid. I knew that my days were up and that I had to show them what happens when you push someone to the limit. There I was, in another country, with around $200 to my name, no car, and no place to sleep. I tried being homeless and it lasted for half a night basically; I was way too paranoid about someone doing something to me, despite the chances being low. I'm a very brittle and sensitive little blob of flesh and meat, despite my 6'2" stature.

So, I booked a hostel and stayed there for the next 10 days ($20 per night), stealing food from the fridge in the common room, and just jerking around on my phone. I didn't interact much with the others. They all seemed like normies so I wasn't interested in conversation.

I didn't have any qualms about stealing the food. If you're hungry, you should be able to eat; that has always been my philosophy. Nobody seemed to care anything when they saw me eating their food. It wasn't like I was getting up at 3AM and sneaking around.

Approaching the 9th day, I knew my time was up once again and obviously, I had to do something about my housing situation or the jig was up. I used all my brain power to conjure my next move and was dumbfounded when I realized the answer was right in front of me from the start: the tourists! They were vulnerable and didn't know what the fuck they were doing so it would be easy to take advantage of them. I targeted the very young (18-21), the very old (55+), and the very stupid. Basically, you had to fulfill two of the three in order to become a target for me. Now, I know what you might be thinking: NOOOOOOOOOOO, not the elderinooooos, they worked their entire lives just to be able to enjoy their last days on earth, how can you be so cruel and merciless?

You're either a NEET or an enemy.

Every person who works for any company has to cuck to another human being to make the company profit. These don't have to be obvious jobs like car salesman or realtor. They also include being a cashier at Walmart with questions such as 'Would you like our dogshit item nobody wants to buy for half the price?' Once you're out in the real world, you realize everyone is cucking everyone and the biggest cuckers are the old motherfuckers! What I would do is offer them a tour of the city for a fee (posing as a tourist guide is exceptionally easy), tell them to meet me at a location 30 minutes from the moment they paid me and simply not show up.

This worked splendidly for around 7 days until someone called the cops on me because they recognized what I was doing. When I saw the cops, I just bolted and they didn't even bother trying to run after me. Lucky me. I had enough money for like another 30 days of the hostel experience; basically around $600 I made from scamming tourists but I wasn't about to mix with normalfags again. I booked a private room for around $50 a night and plotted my next move.

Unfortunately, at that time, I also happened to suffer from a psychotic break where I thought I was god, literally. This led to me roaming the streets, proclaiming the second coming of Jesus (me) and eventually, led to my arrest and admittance into a psychiatric facility. After hearing my entire story, the psychiatrist there diagnosed me with schizoaffective disorder - bipolar type (diagnosis code F25.0) with psychopathic tendencies. The latter didn't sit well with me, because I see nothing bad about being anti-social in an anti-human society.

I started taking the pills and within 7 days, my delusion of grandeur disappeared and I started functioning normally again. After my parents heard what happened to me, I told them I was very sick and needed time to readjust into society. I promised them I would work when I 'readjusted', thinking I could just be a NEET forever! Tragedy struck when I realized I had to either a) Pay for a psychiatrist & pills (very expensive) b) Proclaim myself insane and receive government assistance. I know that many of you would opt for the second choice but government assistance where I live is meager and basically, all your rights are taken away.

You're essentially a free prisoner, if that makes sense. Therefore I chose to be a wagecuck and privately pay for my psychiatrist and meds. If my brain didn't cuck me as hard as it did, I would've probably landed in jail for identity theft and other crimes I don't want to mention. That's where I am right now, just being a wagie ragie. But not for long! I'm living with my parents and saving a ton of money each month. I will be able to retire by 40 if everything goes according to plan. Basically, I'm happy with the lot I've been given and am just taking it one day at a time.

To my fellow NEETs, savor each moment because you never know when you'll be stripped of everything!

MEET SPOTLIGHT: Shinichi Haku

This NEET reached out to me after noticing we both hold similar views about work, society, and are unrepentant writers. This interview wasn't all a circlejerk though. We disagree on some pretty important shit too.

It's always surprising to find financially independent guys who aren't disgusted by being referred to as a NEET. You're the first leanFIRE guy to agree to an interview for NEETpride Magazine and I've reached out to about a dozen. Why are you cool with it?

The first reason is I don't give a fuck what others think of me, though that should be obvious. The second is that I myself am confused that the stereotype is living on gibs with your mother. I mean, it's right there in the name. Not employed, (in) education, (or) training. It doesn't matter how you achieve this, as long as you do. And life is ultimately more comfy if you live alone anyways. The third reason, and what ties everything together, starting with me insisting on picking the first few questions myself is that I am not actually anti work. I am anti slavery. As far as Clown World is concerned, the only meaningful difference between these terms is that I also oppose forms of slavery that don't involve wage-cucking. But I view problems in terms of time/effort required for solving, which means I completely avoid the situation of engaging in actual slave labor instead of just paying $20 and making a problem go away at its root cause. And you will find it's very rare a problem can't be fixed at its root cause on a $20/month budget.

So what exactly is it you did to become a NEET?

At first, computer hardware work. Turns out there's a lot of money in that even though any remotely modern PC is no effort. Later, using machines I built myself (not those owned by clients) for mining crypto. And... that's it. If you're a man and you don't fail at life, you automatically succeed. Failure defined as the college meme or the marriage meme... Of course more clients means more work for the first one, and more machines means more passive income for the second, but see previous remarks.

If you just mean that you're for putting effort into stuff, I agree given that I "work" on this. However, I consider anything you do on your own without expectation of compensation, especially artistic pursuits, to not be work. Is this all you mean? Or are you saying that some jobs are "slave jobs" and some jobs are "good jobs"?

What I mean is what I've noticed is a lot of the NEETs that call themselves this are the exact opposite. They aren't anti slavery, they are anti work. And basically they become reverse thots, slaving away for 5-10 hours or more over a problem they could fix by paying a complete stranger 20 bucks. (thots, of course consider housework on their own houses enslavement, but corporate housework on someone else's liberating) Basically they own goal themselves because they don't keep their eyes on the prize and understand the goal isn't avoiding work, the goal is avoiding spending time and effort on your enemies' causes instead of your own and avoiding work is just the most common side effect of this. The cost is the same though - a lot of time not being comfy.

In the Current Year Clown World, it isn't really possible that a "good job" exists, though there certainly are means of earning money that require little or no effort (admittedly, these are also less effective in Current Year). Even my writing is something I'd consider a bad job if it were a job just because it wouldn't pay enough for the amount of time and effort involved while remaining a quality and focused work. Just the fact NPCs are the primary enemy, and also a massive supermajority of the world's population limits my popularity immensely. Now I am fine with this as a non profit venture (the proceeds are spent on art commissions), but if I actually needed the money it'd annoy me.

Mostly though, the anti slavery part just means I'd rather not be dependent on others, as this is a weakness that will be exploited mercilessly and won't even get you a reacharound like the wagecuck does.

Building a computer from raw natural resources, maintaining the power grid, developing new medicine, you can't do these things without at least building off the back of work other people did. Don't you think everyone is heavily dependent on others just for society to keep functioning? Or are you defining "dependent" to more or less mean "employed by"?

I differentiate between being dependent on people and being dependent on things. And before you say well aschually, the things are delivered by people... it doesn't matter who delivers the tendies at my door, as long as someone does so. It'd be more accurate if I said that business relationships generally work, and personal ones do not as the end result of me paying a complete stranger 8 dollars a month is that tendies (and other foods) are delivered at my door. In fact, grocery delivery in particular is so very optimal right now they are actually specifically nerfing it by adding in code in which managers can restrict delivery on certain items by zipcode, by state, or overall... all so you must actually go in the store and deal with the wagiecagies and the Karens and the like.

You seem to value being comfy. You also seem to disapprove of thots. Men in the redpill/tradcon community might say these are contradictory positions to hold because stoicism/suffering is (according to them) masculine whereas thots tend to be obsessed with comfort. Do you disagree with them?

As an actual stoic I will succinctly break down how fucking retarded they are. Stoicism, in one sentence is accepting what you cannot change. So you accept you cannot change soyciety, you cannot "save it" or any other such childish nonsense, and then you look at what you can change. You. You cannot make soyciety worth participating in, but you can secure your wants and needs without doing participating yourself. Additionally, masculinity defined by any source outside the self... isn't.

(continued from end of page 5)

Even the stereotype of some hundred fifty kilogram land orca living in his mother's basement manifests more masculinity by doing what he wants without caring for the judgment of others than these fake posers do by taking pride in being a good slave for fefails. Someone like me, who even the TradCucks wouldn't even call a NEET... because apparently calling someone who retired early a NEET means admitting their entire lives were lies. I have some things I can say about ChristCuckery too. Give ya a hint, it's a "morality" that has no relation with being a good person (being moral) and is all about fear of hell or purgatory. Finally, one more thing. Suffering actually is valuable, but only if it serves a purpose. In this hollow, rotten Clown World, it does not, it's just part of the torture farm.

I've said before that, despite heavy overlap in membership, the NEET community should generally try to distance itself from the incel/antifeminist community because it's bad optics. I'm not saying to ally with feminist end of the spectrum or even deny any affiliation. I just think we should discourage vocal affiliation. I know you said you don't care about this sort of macroscale culture war strategic discussion, but do you have anything to say about this?

Optics cucking is shit, and I oppose it and everything it stands for (or rather, does not stand for). I don't have any interest in incels for the same reason I don't have any interest in most NEET communities. They take a positive as a negative and are just so fucking angry all the time. And yes, I do have a dim and cynical view of the world, but see that's why I largely avoid it. Problem, meet solution. I am not just bitching impotently. But literally, incels are suicidal. It's right there in the name. Involuntary celibate. They want marriage (read: are retarded) but can't get it. Success means failing at failing. Incidentally, TradCucks are also incels, though sometimes they have oneitis for the supersized afterthot who is using them as a beta orbiter.

If you have these more profitable ventures, why not make paying for your books pay-what-you-want? It's information that can be generated and reproduced infinitely for pennies. It's more about sharing your ideas more than making money, right? If it's more about money, are you trying to build up wealth for the sake of a particular goal?

As for the books, I can't take any sort of poorfag argument seriously on the grounds my books are on Kindle Unlimited (read: are already free, but I still get paid if you read them). This is the one instance where piracy does equal lost sales, and while I can't prevent that from happening eventually, I will not be encouraging it either. Besides, Amazon doesn't have such a model, and if they did pay what you want would result in free at least 70% of the time anyways. Which is... no different from what is happening now. Except for the part where I still get paid even if you, the reader do not pay me as long as you read the thing. That said, they remain a non profit enterprise. More success with the series just means better art, and that isn't cheap at all, at least not if you want the good stuff. What someone paying me represents in this case is non virtue signaling support, as stuff like likes are fucking useless. These ideas are already in my head, someone giving a few dollars by either buying the book or reading the entire thing on KU is telling me they want those ideas shared with them and will prove it through their actions.

So you've got it made thanks to crypto. Mind divulging a few details for beginners?

Crypto is remarkably simple, though it is locking down now, at least in Weimerica. First you build at least one mining machine, and this is just a computer with low end cpu and ram, mid or high end graphics cards and lots of them, and a strong power supply. Mine used 6 RX 580s and 1000/1200W PSUs. This was optimal at the time I made them but there are likely better choices now (especially since the formerly $200 cards are now $600).

(continued from end of page 6)

You'll also need risers obviously because graphics cards are fat and you won't fit more than 2 on a motherboard otherwise even if it could technically hold much more. This initial investment isn't cheap, obviously, which is why I advocate for some error tolerance (discretionary income). If you are at the low end and the usual bills leave you with $20 a month, yeah you aren't affording this shit, don't even think about it.

I just mined Ethereum using freely available software. I don't know if this is actually optimal, as www.whattomine.com likely lies about the profitability of other coins, and Bitcoin itself is off limits because you need an ASIC (specialized hardware) for it to be worth it at all and at that point you're spending $3K on a mystery blackbox from China (by comparison computer parts still go in computers, and have actual warranties, so you have safeguards).

What is your vision of an ideal world? Not specifically for you, for people in general.

Read my books. I lay it out quite clearly, along with making it just as clear you need reality altering power before such a world can even exist. Remember, anti slavery, not anti work. The world of my books very much requires effort so you're not worthless, at the same time you actually get something out of putting forth that effort. It's not just a matter of existing and engaging with bread and circuses. And the various NPCs get put in their fucking places as they are gatekept out.

As far as things that can actually happen though, there is only the ideal world for me, and it is as I have described - engaging with others as little as possible. I literally wouldn't speak with people if it weren't for shilling my books. This wouldn't necessarily work with others, because unless you are human and not autistic you still artificially need others even if they aren't adding anything.

Poorfags typically don't pay for Amazon Prime and always pirate prior to purchasing. It goes without saying that if people had a basic income they'd be more willing to check out your writing. Thoughts on UBI?

UBI is a meme. And it is a meme for three reasons. 1: The "useless eaters" on it will simply be genocided (this is already happening). 2: I've danced around this a few times already, but income does not fucking matter. Buying power matters. All prices will simply raise accordingly. This HAS already happened. Also, in the event that whatever amount of UBI was "enough" (hint: 1k WON'T do the job anymore if UBI is ever actually implemented, even though it demonstrably is good enough now) the end result would be that no one ever works again, which brings us... 3: Gynocentric society wishes that men be the batteries powering it. So the mere concept of achieving the ultimate goal in life without subsidizing females is abhorrent for them, even if you do so by conventional retirement which they can't say shit about without admitting their entire lives are lies. This is why it's not a coincidence that after 3.2k total (read: not enough for anyone who actually needs money, but a free virtue signalling bonus for anyone who does not) all the gibs became specifically aimed at single mothers, aka child tax credit.

A NEET's LeanFIRE Strategy

Freeing yourself from work is no easy feat. Doing it without relying on government welfare is even more impressive. This is how one brilliant NEET beat the system.

I reached financial independence at 28 following aggressive FIRE while working in tech. Got lucky with stock options and crypto all while making $300k+ with monthly costs of ~$800. Now I'm 30 and don't see myself ever working again. If being a NEET was a realistic option for me before reaching financial independence I would've started a decade earlier.

The long story short is that I've never felt I needed more than a roof over my head, a decent computer, and a good internet connection. Having a very good computer at a young age, I ran VM labs to simulate business environments and got very good at IT. Straight out of high school I got my first IT job at a state university making $50k. By 19 I was making $80k at a fast growing pre-IPO startup. I figured my stock options wouldn't be worth anything. The salary alone was what drew me in.

I still had no interest in spending beyond my very simple needs. So when I stumbled across the FIRE movement I realized I could easily retire by 30 if I tried. At 23 I moved from $90k (after a few raises) to a remote director level job making $180k for a major tech company. Upon leaving for the new remote job, I purchased my fully vested stock options and partially vested refresh options. The total cost was less than $500 and the valuation already placed them as being worth $40k. I figured at that strike price it was well worth the risk. Another 4 years later my total comp was nearing $300k and my former employer would be purchased for a ten figure sum; resulting in the largest check I've ever seen being mailed to me along with around eight pounds of paperwork detailing the financial terms of the purchase.

Bonus LeanFIRE Protips

- 1) Find a place to live that either has good public transport or is very walkable. Yes, it is possible to find a cheap place like this, even in America. Start your search in college towns. It's debatable whether owning a house is really financially preferable over renting for most living situations.
- 2) Invest in bitcoin. I haven't been convinced any other cryptocurrency is worth it but do your own research and don't invest anything you can't afford to lose.
- 3) Gain real life crafting skills. Learn how to repair your clothes, furniture, electronics, etc. If you're a NEET, you have all the time in the world.

| SKILLS | TRAITS |
|-------------------------|-----------------|
| shotguns: 0 (0%) | Bookworm |
| submachine guns: 0 (0%) | Fast Learner |
| throwing: 0 (0%) | Fast Reflexes |
| Crafting skills | |
| applied science: 0 (0%) | BIONICS |
| electronics: 0 (0%) | Power: 0 mJ / 0 |
| fabrication: 2 (0%) | |
| food handling: 1 (0%) | SW:z |
| survival: 0 (0%) | |
| tailoring: 1 (0%) | z zombi |

5 TYPES OF FIRE

WWW.INSPIRETOFIRE.COM

COAST FIRE

ACCUMULATING ENOUGH MONEY TO STOP CONTRIBUTING AND STILL REACH FIRE IN THE FUTURE

BARISTA FIRE

HAVING ENOUGH MONEY TO SWITCH TO PART-TIME FOR THE ADDITIONAL INCOME AND HEALTH INSURANCE

LEAN FIRE

THE MINIMALIST WAY OF REACHING FIRE AND MEANS RETIRING WITH A "LEAN" BUDGET

REGULAR FIRE

ACCUMULATING 25 TIMES YOUR ANNUAL EXPENSES AND RETIRING EARLY USING THE 4% RULE

FAT FIRE

GROWING A LARGER NEST EGG TO RETIRE EARLY WITHOUT EMBRACING FRUGALITY

WWW.INSPIRETOFIRE.COM

Around the same time crypto would begin to really take off. I wasn't heavily active in crypto over the years, but back when Bitcoin was essentially worthless I had mined a considerable amount of Bitcoin out of curiosity rather than greed. With a considerable savings, a single check large enough to buy a house outright, and an amount of Bitcoin on track to become more valuable than the prior two amounts combined I decided to retire at the ripe old age of 28. And despite making more and more money over these years, my maintenance costs had gone down quite a bit.

While working my first IT job I wouldn't blink at spending $12 for lunch, plus gas, car insurance, and wear-and-tear on my vehicle. By 28 I had been working from my parent's home since rent was free and groceries mostly covered. I hadn't had a car in years since, on the rare occasion I actually needed a car, it was cheaper just to rent one, take public transit, or get a ride from a friend.

All together my monthly costs were (and still are) around $800 and most of that is paying off zero interest loans for high end electronics. However, in recent years I've found open hardware alternatives such as the PineBook and PinePhone can perform as well as high end-devices when sufficiently debloated and run with carefully compiled firmware.

One obvious place this isn't true is gaming. For that I've moved most of my gaming to the cloud gaming service shadow.tech, which provides a full Windows install with a 1080GTX or better (typically better) for $29.99 a month. With this I can play most games on Ultra at 1440p (sometimes higher) with high framerate using only a $99 laptop or $49 Android TV device.

So that's the short version of how I got to where I am. Some unnecessary but welcome luck, a whole lot of aforementioned (but implied) ramen, rice, and hot pockets and, above all else, a strong will to be a hermit who finds more pleasure in the free (read: pirated) things in life than in working and spending.

MEET ASSASSIN SHOCKS THE WORLD!!!

From the originators of NEET culture (I know England invented the term NEET, but Japan def invented NEET culture) comes the most shocking news ever created by a NEET.

On July 8th, 2022 Tetsuya Yamagami walked up behind Shinzo Abe and shot him twice in the back. So why am I writing about this murderer? Because he was and is a NEET. Am I glorifying this murderer? I guess maybe a little. But my main point here isn't that murder is good, it's that being a NEET does NOT mean giving up your chance to make an impact. You can change the world, for the better or the worse, because as a NEET you can go wherever you want and do whatever you want to do. Yamagami saw a problem and used his finite time on Earth as a NEET to fix it. He had two shots to realize his vengeance and he pulled it off.

Let's get this out of the way: Yamagami (which means God of the Mountain btw) is a 41 year old former member of the Japanese Navy and some people are citing this as a reason to not consider him a NEET. To them I ask, are homeless veterans not homeless by virtue of being a veteran too? Of course not.

Shinzo Abe's long political career is defined by abuses of power. Now for the most part it's stuff that is at least to me not that bad, like how he used his political sway to help his personal friends bypass a bloated bureaucracy and cheaply starting up a school. The main problem I knew about Abe before his assassination was his warhawkishness which I definitely do not approve of, like how he is aching for WWII. He even forced through a bill that shat all over Japans formerly pacifist constitution. But it gets worse. A few years later he also forced through an "anti-terrorism" (read: anti-freedom) bill that was not only massively unpopular with actual citizens, it received vocal opposition from other members of the politician class. He basically is the author of the Japanese PATRIOT Act. Abe wielded so much political power behind-the-scenes that he's sometimes unironically referred to as "The Shadow Shogun." The final boss of Japan.

The cult scandal explained:

A lot of Americans don't know this, but in 2016 there was a massive scandal in South Korea tying their prime minister to a shamanistic cult. I know, it sounds made-up. Enter the "Family Federation for World Peace and Unification" AKA the Unification Church, another Christian cult that also originated in South Korea. Apparently Yamagami's mother was in a bad place after her husband (and Yamagami's father) committed seppuku, and the cult exploited her vulnerability to get her to join. Yamagami himself was still just a helpless 4 year old boy at this time. He could do nothing but watch as this cult stole his mother from him, along with hundreds of thousands of dollars. Yamagami's uncle said he had to stop giving money for food and school to the Yamagami children because the mother gave it to the church, not her children. Tetsuya Yamagami himself has actually denied that the killing was political in nature, and more that he held a grudge against the Unification Cult for destroying his family. Yamagami reportedly told police he had planned to kill the church founder's wife and current leader, Hak Ja Han Moon, who has led the church since her husband Sun Myung Moon's 2012 death, but switched targets because it was unlikely she'd visit Japan during the pandemic.

"Though I feel bitter, Abe is not my true enemy. He is only one of the Unification Church's most influential sympathizers," Yamagami wrote in his letter. "I've already lost the mental space to think about political meanings or the consequences Abe's death will bring." When reached for comment, Yamagami's mother reportedly apologized to the cult.

Handmade gun carried by Tetsuya Yamagami

According to Nara prefectural police

There was no secured perimeter around Abe as the attacker was able to get so close to him and his PSOs were not guarding his rear. Rather, Abe's PSOs were looking in the direction of Abe, rather than behind him from where the attacker approached and fired. There were three seconds between the first shot that missed Abe and subsequent shots that killed him. After the first missed shot, the bodyguards should have blocked the line of fire by bodily protecting the target and escort Abe to safety. Instead, video footage reveals, the guards ran towards the assassin leaving Abe unprotected. This gave the assassin enough time to take the second shot which proved fatal.

Enough about that dead Abe fag and his gay-ass cult. This article is about the man of the hour, Yamagami. Yamagami resigned from his position in the Japanese Maritime Self-Defence Force in 2005, then tried to kill himself. He also was a factory worker for a period. He's a member of what's referred to as the "lost generation" that's been stuck with shitty work prospects and a zombie economy. The only real difference between Japan and America in this regard is Japan hit this phase of civilization in 1992 rather than 2008. Just like in America, violent terrorist acts keep happening with accelerating frequency and committed by lone wolves; disillusioned young men with nothing to lose. In a land without gun rights, he made his own firearm and ammunition from scratch. Improvised explosive devices were also found at his mountain home by police. After the shooting, he did not even attempt to flee and is reported as calmly responding to the police's questioning. His main goal was to force a spotlight on Shinzo Abe's ties to the Unification Church, the same cult that ripped apart his family. Regardless of what you think of his means, you can't deny that he succeeded.

Yamagami is currently being held for mental evaluation until November 2022.

BuT hOw WiLl We PaY fOr It?

I'm not a very political guy. But one of the few policy positions I do care about is basic income. All NEETs should. It essentially would legalize NEETdom. There is obviously no moral reason to oppose UBI, but what the bootstrap bitches fail to realize is there is no fiscal reason to oppose UBI either. Hit me up if you want to debate about UBI. I have never lost.

There are lots of ideas to fund it. One possibility is basically something like a federally enforced Amazoncoin cryptocurrency. You could buy anything from Amazon (or some other megacorp) with Amazoncoin which means you can buy pretty much the basics for running a household. Basically food stamps on steroids. Amazon would not be allowed to control the cryptocurrency and the federal government would force them to accept it as payment. What does Amazon get out of this? The government would refrain from breaking up the megacorp, lower their taxes, remove regulations, etc until the megacorp agreed. Its not like the government isn't already in bed with tons of corporations. If everyone receives a UBI of Amazoncoin, and it's guaranteed that it will always be easy to buy groceries with it, other people will be more likely to accept the cryptocurrency as payment for rent, bills, services. No one other than Amazon would be legally forced to accept it.

The national debt is currently something like $30 trillion. It was $5 trillion 25 years ago, which means we've been on average a trillion dollars over budget every year. I noticed someone who "cares about the numbers" in this thread keeps bringing up the trillion dollar figure. Spending keeps going up yet has your life gotten better or worse in the past 25 years? My guess is that it got better for you too, despite the pandemic, despite all the bullshit that happened. Now imagine if the country going a trillion dollars into debt next year (because they're not gonna stop spending) resulted in you receiving some cash instead of Raytheon, the Ukraine government, and Hunter Biden's meth dealer.

The money never leaves the country, dumbass.

There's also the idea of copying Norway and socializing natural resource profits, putting it in mutual funds, and using the resulting money to fund all welfare. As one of the largest oil producing nations in the world, we could just do exactly what Norway does and socialize our oil. Seems to benefit them. We could also use data. Your taxes wouldn't go up if all of the big tech companies suddenly stopped making money. Hell, most of them are propped up by your tax money already anyway.

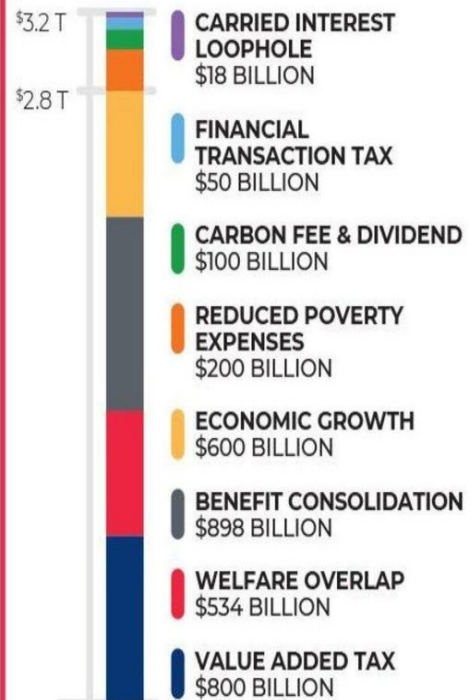

Another option is a more general fedcoin everyone is forced to take as legal tender that essentially is just a new USD. Instead of the federal reserve creating new currency whenever, it automatically generates coins in everyone's permanent deposit wallet that's tied to a social security number or biometric data. There are tons of ideas for a decentralized UBI. None have worked yet, but things have to get much worse for any of them to have a chance: <https://cryptoslate.com/coins/decentralized-universal-basic-income/>

Besides, we seem to have no problem finding infinite money for senator salaries, military budgets, deep state agencies, prisons, bank bailouts, etc. Why would it suddenly become difficult to find money when it's for something not evil?

Remember, the state giving citizens money is functionally identical to cutting their taxes: in both cases the state gives everyday citizens more purchasing power without work. What do you think would happen if we cut everyone's taxes by ~$10000/year? That is also what would happen if we implemented a true UBI. Tax cuts have a pretty good track record of stimulating the economy. Why would a monthly stimulus check be any different?

HOW ANDREW YANG WILL PUT $1000/MONTH IN YOUR POCKET

WITHOUT BORROWING A CENT.

Yang's kinda cucked, and half that chart is kinda bullshit ($600 billion in economic growth is in no way guaranteed). But it's not like anyone has come up with a better solution to the in-progress collapse.

The increasing efficiency of technology generates deflation, but governments can (and do) print money to offset it. So, with the passage of time it will be possible to print more and more money without causing runaway inflation, and use it as UBI. This is not a theory. This is what we already do... except instead of giving the printed money back to the taxpayers, it is given directly to the taxavoiders AKA megacorps.

Pris 2022-05-10 22:46:50 No.7685

> politics and economics lololol
I'm still over here being a NEET and you can't stop me.

Remove work from your vocabulary

“Now just ~~work~~ the clay into the shape of a pot.” => “Now just mold the clay into the shape of a pot.”
“You’ll see me after you ~~work~~ through the crowd.” => “You’ll see me after you get through the crowd.”
“I need to ~~work~~ up the courage to quit my job.” => “I need to build up the courage to quit my job.”
“Anchovies on pizza is not gonna ~~work~~ for me.” => “Anchovies on pizza doesn’t sound good to me.”
“I really ~~worked~~ up an appetite by fucking all day.” => “I became really hungry by fucking all day.”
“She can really ~~work~~ miracles with a blade.” => “She is really good at using a blade.”
“Do you really think that will ~~work~~?” => “Do you really think that’s a good idea?”
“Thank you for getting my laptop to ~~work~~.” => “Thank you for fixing my laptop.”
“Let’s ~~work~~ out a time to meet up.” => “Let’s figure out a time to meet up.”
“I’m a huge fan of your ~~work~~.” => “I’m a huge fan of your writing.”
“The toilet does not ~~work~~.” => “The toilet does not function.”
“I’m gonna go ~~work~~ out.” => “I’m gonna go lift weights.”
“Don’t get so ~~worked~~ up.” => “Don’t get so irritated.”
“Nice ~~work~~!” => “Nicely done!”

While this piece is a bit tongue-in-cheek, words have power and should be wielded with caution.

It’s insidious how much this word infests the English language, betraying our dark puritan roots. It wor- can be utilized in a huge variety of contexts, but notice how in most instances ‘work’ is substituted for a positive thing. This is an unintentional reflection of one’s thoughts or rather the propaganda foisted upon you by a culture that worships work. But it’s a two-way street: by using the word ‘work’ in a positive way you will subconsciously view work in a positive light.

Politicians frequently do something similar. It’s not enough that mere families receive help. They must be “working families.” Also read what Sanders is saying here:

He says “middle class AND working families.” What is the implication here? That middle class people don’t work? Nah, other way around: people who work are below middle class. Sanders has never held a real job in his entire life. If you look at his earlier speeches, “working families” was not a meme he often needed to utilize. It’s only in the past few decades that he started implenting this politician lifehack.

The other implication is that mere “families” don’t deserve anything from the government. Fuck them. They should fucking die. It’s only after you sacrifice the best years of your life to work that you deserve any help from anyone.

To my mind, if we do not get a handle on money in politics and the degree to which big money controls the political process in this country, nobody is going to bring about the changes that is needed in this country for the middle class and working families.

— Bernie Sanders —

AZ QUOTES

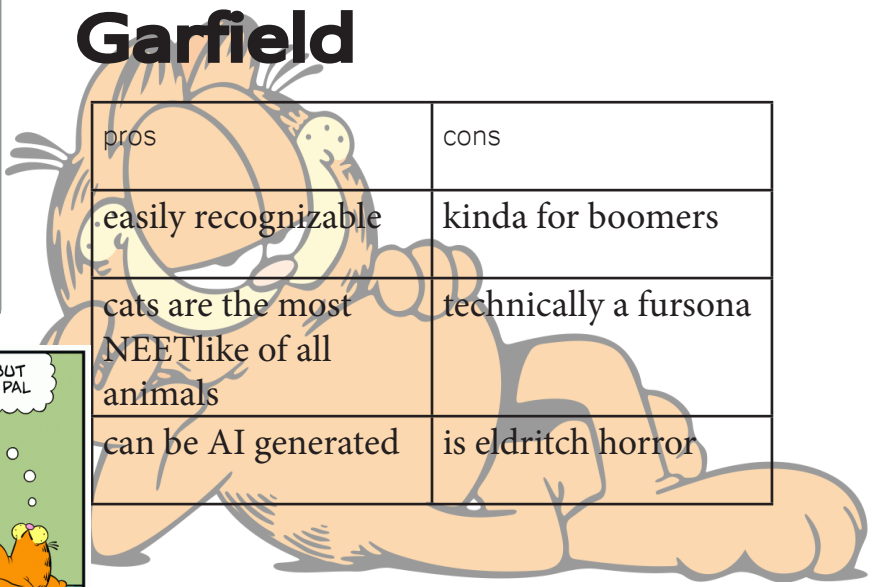

Because apparently, “work” is the fundamental requirement for being treated like a person. Stop falling prey to this neurolinguistic programming this. Stop using “working” as a euphemism for “functional.” Excise ‘work’ from your vocabulary. It might seem like a lot of wor- a challenge, but the payoff is worth it.

Who Is the Mascot of NEETdom?

We need to come up with a mascot for this publication, like that guy on MAD Magazine. A cartoon host on your journey through NEETpride Magazine. A friendly face on every cover. Who should it be? Cast your vote or make a new suggestion! We'll figure it out eventually.

Garfield

| pros | cons |
|---|-----------------------|
| easily recognizable | kinda for boomers |
| cats are the most NEETlike of all animals | technically a fursona |
| can be AI generated | is eldritch horror |

Lebowski

| pros | cons |
|---|---------------------------------------|
| was the initial branding I went with at NEETpride | has a lot of baggage attached to it |
| easily recognizable | immediately turns off a lot of people |
| a lot of pre-existing content | technically a fursona |

Comfy Pepe

| pros | cons |
|-----------------|---|
| Vietnam veteran | some people might not get the reference |
| is a chad | is a boomer |
| smokes weed | only that 1 movie |

| pros | cons |
|--|--|
| cute 2D girl | technically she is employed |
| coined the legendary meme, "If you work, you lose" | kinda blends in with other anime girls |
| portable idol | physically weak |

Neeko

ANOTHER DAY AS A NEET... DOING NOTHING BUT FAT, PLAY AND SLEEP...

| pros | cons |
|----------------------|--|
| cute 2D girl | is not proud to be a NEET |
| closest name to NEET | does get various jobs throughout the story |
| thicc | not super recognizable |

GOMER GOOF

Gomer Goof

| pros | cons |
|--|---|
| closest in identity to most real NEETs | technically has a job, he just slacks off a lot |
| lots of pre-existing content | oftentimes he is plain incompetent |
| proudly takes it easy | not super recognizable |

Neptune

| pros | cons |
|----------------------------------|--|
| cute 2D girl | kinda has a unpaid job, she just doesn't do it |
| can't spell Neptune without NEET | replaces every other word with "Nep." |
| gamer goddess | will eat your pudding without remorse |

Master Higuchi was no hermit-master or anything, but just some eighth-year student.

Master Higuchi

| pros | cons |
|--------------------|--------------------------------|
| wise as shit | technically a graduate student |
| smokes weed | from a somewhat obscure anime |
| bird lives in hair | jaw tumor |

Darius the Drug Lion

| pros | cons |
|---|--------------------------------------|
| smokes weed | technically a fursona |
| a lion jives with the "pride" aspect of NEETpride | may trigger DARE flashbacks and PTSD |
| whitepilled millions of kids on drugs | zoomers won't get it |

The 8fold Path of the Comfy NEET: Hyper Dank Remaster

Don't like being a NEET?

I'm not claiming every single NEET has to do every single thing on the list to be comfy. But if you're depressed as a NEET, make sure you at least try following the 8fold path before killing yourself, or worse, getting a job. Remember, the point of this shit is not actually to make you a better person or the world a better place. It's to make you feel good.

Nutrition

Nutrition is the fundamental requirement for being comfy. You can check off all the other 7 things on the 8fold path, but without this you will literally be dead. Food does more than keep you alive though. It has a massive impact on your psyche.

Food is drugs. Never let anyone tell you otherwise. When I see an obese person, I see someone suffering negative health repercussions from abusing an addictive substance. There are a few prescriptions I think are generally good for everybody. Breatharianism is bullshit. You gotta drink water and eat fiber. I suppose not everyone has the means to do this, but I still super-recommend growing kale. Starting to eat fresh kale regularly is the single diet change I've made in my life with the most positive effect. There is a reason why old people swear by it. Canned salmon is probably the most nutrient dense thing I eat and canned salmon has less mercury in it than other fish.

Everyone has different nutrition requirements and to make things more confusing they will change with age. We know the food pyramid was government propaganda to help the farm subsidies be worth it. The only way for you to truly know what's best for you is to conduct longitudinal studies on yourself. All nutritionists are charlatans. If you're serious about feeling better, just keep a food diary on your phone. Track what you eat and how you feel. Eventually patterns will emerge. You don't have to do this forever, just until you figure out what diet your body likes. I've already figured this out for myself. Last time I wrote on the 8fold Path, I used a $100/month budget, but due to hyperinflation, I've started using a $200/month food budge. It certainly does suck. Regardless, you can eat healthy for cheap. Here is a rough grocery list for a month using $200 if you're trying to stretch out your EBT:

- $15 - 60 eggs (omega-3s & protein & B12)
- $8 - 24 packs of ramen (calories & protein)
- $40 - 40 lbs of rice (calories)
- $10 - 8 lbs of carrots (complex carbs)
- $24 - 8 lbs canned salmon (omega-3s & protein)
- $10 - 2 lbs cheese (protein)
- $10 - blueberries (antioxidants)
- $10 - 40 sheets of sushi nori (antioxidants)
- $20 - 8 lbs of chicken (protein)
- $5 - 20 frozen hash browns (calories)
- $5 - 5 lbs sweet potatoes (fiber & complex carbs)
- $3 - 5 lbs of onions (taste)
- $5 - 5 packs of pickled radishes (taste)
- $10 - 15 lbs brown rice (fiber & complex carbs)
- $3 - 2 lbs dried black beans (protein & fiber)
- $3 - 2 lbs dried chickpeas (protein)
- $2 - 2 cans of tomatoes (taste)
- $7 - 2 frozen pizzas (taste & calories)
- $10 - various hot sauces (taste)

Cutting out carbs does seem to help most people, but personally? I seem to do fine eating that stuff, and you just can't beat the dollar/calorie value. Everyone should try cutting out everything at some point in your self-imposed logitudinal studies though. Even food altogether (for a day or two)! Regular fasting is one of the best things you can do, though perhaps that fits more in the next section.

Maintenance

This is kind of a strange facet of the path because it encompasses a variety otherwise disparate things. Think of your body like a machine. Food is the fuel, water is the oil. But there's more to it than that. You have to put the machine through the motions occasionally so the parts don't rust, but you also have to shut it down periodically. Can you touch your toes? Even if you have no specific reason to, you will feel better if you're more flexible. Japanese NEETs know to do light pliometrics if they're gonna be on a computer all day.

Sleep is probably the aspect of maintenance most people, not just NEETs, are lacking in. You have to sleep to be mentally and physically healthy. As a NEET you have the freedom to sleep whenever you want so you may want to try a biphasic sleep schedule. But you also can't sleep too much. The sweet spot seems to vary between 6-9 hours of sleep per day. Best protip for getting a good night's sleep? Quit doing caffeine.

I don't think of house chores or living space optimization as work. They're something you have to do to feel good. For instance, when something in your life is unoptimized, optimize it. Let's say you've noticed trash keeps piling up in your room. Put a trashcan in there. An overhead light is obnoxiously bright, but you still need some light? Wrap it in a thin T-shirt or some paper. Constantly losing your train of thought on your computer desktop or in your browser's bookmarks list? Do some organizing. Messy room? That's right, bucko.

The benefit here isn't really the optimization itself (though that's a plus). It's the positive psychological effect on YOU when you exert control over your environment. Even people who are comfortable in a mess have some sort of organization in their head i.e. organized chaos. The problem is that internal organization takes up valuable brainpower and unless you have a ton of brainpower to spare, it will lead to stress.

I also want to include regularly scheduled orgasms here. Securing that post-nut clarity is just something have to do in order to be mentally, and yes, physically, healthy. Unfortunately, women aren't willing to have casual sex with 99% of men and god cursed humanity with the biological drive to orgasm. Ever wonder why most women behave so strangely, emotionally, impulsively, and counterproductively? That only happens when they aren't orgasming because masturbating requires more effort for them and they can't get a hot enough partner.

Exercise

I still think heavy exercise is the first thing you ought to try if you're depressed. The free opiates (AKA endorphins) are enough for most people, but at the very least you'll get a mental boost from doing what you said you were gonna. I was born lucky. I apparently don't need to do more than light activity to be content. But before you get too envious, just know that I have experimented with doing literally nothing all day and I eventually get sad from the lack of exercise too. I still walk every day and do yard chores like chopping wood which require some muscle exertion, but I no longer really do HIIT or weight lifting anymore. I also have sadly discovered lifting weights and trying to build muscle is pointless when you sell your plasma. The neurological benefits seem to be retained. Humans did not really evolve to do more than endurance running anyway.

Furthermore, I've kinda changed my tune on needing to be disciplined enough to learn about things that don't really interest you for the sake of improving your discipline. It's far easier to improve your ability to retain focus on something you already are actually interested in, rather than some foreign language you merely feel like you ought to learn. That ability to focus, i.e. your mental stamina, is actually better improved by increasing your physical stamina anyway, not trudging through some mediocre book.

One of the most common criticisms of NEETs is that we can't handle stress because we take it easy all the time. Exercise and antiNEETs will have to cross that potential attack vector off their list.

Projects

While I've now downranked the importance of Exercise/Training, I think Projects are even more important. The #1 thing that makes everyone, not just NEETs, unhappy is lacking a purpose. What is your purpose? I dunno. Only you can answer that for yourself, and it's unlikely you'll figure it out til your 30s. But it probably isn't whatever you're doing in exchange for money and it definitely is something you love to do.

I understand how counterintuitive this is. How is this any different from working without getting paid? Trust me, the last thing I want to do is "smuggle in work" to NEET culture. Consider what function work serves for most individual employees. For the lucky few who enjoy their careers it's in fact not exclusively money. It's the idea that you matter. That you're contributing to something greater than yourself. That you're doing more than merely existing. That you're self-actualized. At least 85% of workers don't get any of that from their jobs.

But still, why should you bother putting time and effort towards something when you don't directly benefit financially? The reason has nothing to do with a higher purpose or making the world a better place. It's solely to benefit you. To stimulate production of dopamine by creating a plan, hitting the milestones, & achieving your goals. At the same time, interesting projects function as a sort of shield from wagecuck attacks. When wagecucks try to claim that you do nothing all day, you can correct them by showing off what you did. Shove the cool and fun shit you get to do as a NEET in their faces.

Indeed, that is one of the purposes behind this very publication: to have an on-going "default" interesting project anyone can collaborate on and contribute to over the net with no barriers to entry. If you've tried everything else on this list yet still can't seem to find contentment with life you might as well give it a try. I'll suggest stuff if you got nothing in mind. The best way to get in touch with me is here: <https://neet-pride.wordpress.com/contact/>

Socialization

You as well as your brain are complicated bioma-chines, therefore there are some things you necessarily have to do in order to keep the machine operational. You don't have to work. But you have to eat, you have to sleep, you have to shit, you have to orgasm, and you have to get some exercise. You also have to socialize. Or more accurately, exchange information with other sentient entities. Yes, this means General Artificial Intelligence will eventually be sufficient. I don't think you necessarily have to constantly be forming new friendships (which is good because it's nearly impossible as an adult).

Since 5 years have passed, it actually seems easier than it used to be to hangout on the internet thanks to improved online communication tools and the fact that COVID forced everybody to become at least temporary NEETs & hikkis. Playing games or collaborating on a project online together is great too, but has the requirement that you're actually good at the game or that your project is sufficiently interesting. There is also the risk that people you meet in a game or who jump aboard your project team have an ulterior motive. If you really just want to watch TV, chat, and hang out, there is far less to worry about. The biggest risk is no one responds.

Don't discount making friends online entirely though. A discord friend you call every other day is a genuine friend. Conversely, wageslaves have to view all their coworkers as potential threats, never knowing who may backstab you in their pursuit of winning the rat race.

Like with nutrition or anything else on this list, people can vary dramatically in how much they really need to socialize. Some people don't need more than a roommate or dog. Some people need three best friends simultaneously. If you're unhappy, and you've tried everything else on this list, consider looking for some new people to chat with. Force yourself to talk to strangers. Easier said than done, but if you'd rather continue to hate being a NEET, you do you, I guess.

+

=

GROUPMATCH A BAD MOVIE AND TALK SHIT ABOUT IT

Play

Active entertainment i.e. “play” refers to playing games of all types as well stuff like DnD or skateboarding. Vidya, sports, poker, these are all only worth doing if you like the feeling they give you. Play is something all healthy humans engage in. Most wagecucks/wageslaves lack the time and energy to actively participate in their entertainment which is precisely why they are so unhealthy. After a hard day’s work few people have energy left to play games. They rely on passive entertainment just like they rely on drugs. Maybe some people can live like that, but I know I sure as hell can’t.

I’d argue one of the best litmus tests for whether or not you are mentally healthy is whether or not you still enjoy playing games. If literally nothing in your backlog gets you excited, that’s likely because you are deficient in one of the other 7 things on the 8fold path. Consider trying something you’re sure you won’t like. For the memes.

If you like video games even a little bit, you will never run out of 10/10 games to play unless you gain digital immortality. Get involved in the emulation scene to have access to every game up to the PS3 generation. You don’t necessarily have to pirate either what with all the freeware, freemium, and indie games now available these days.

In real life, there are no rules and success is randomly distributed based on the stats the RNG dealt you at birth. This is one of the most frustrating things about existence. Games are microcosms of life except with actual structure. Do the thing, get the points. It’s logical. Humans (generally) crave a world with consistent, albeit artificially-imposed, rules. It’s why we have religion and laws. Playing games is the only thing on this list that sates that natural human urge.

Free groupwatch: caracal, cytube, hyperbeam

Free anime: 9anime, wcostream, animelon

Free general TV: Ymovies, Actvid, PlutoTV

Free games: IGG-games, CDromance, GOG-games

Stories

Passive entertainment i.e. “stories” is stuff you sit there and consume. Movies, news, anime, video essays, podcasts, shit like that. Books and reading material is kinda borderline given that reading takes a lot more mental effort than being read to or watching actors. Everyone from every corner of the world has some appreciation for storytellers.

This is by far the easiest facet of the 8fold to satisfy. There’s nothing you have to do, no skill you have to develop. Like with Play, if you find yourself unable to watch anything chances are you are deficient in some other aspect of the 8fold path. Remember: not enjoying anime or games doesn’t mean you’re “mature.” It means you’re defective.

It’s pretty easy to find good deals on media these days what with all the streaming services and free content. Personally, I pirate everything and always use an ablocker. Sometimes it’s difficult to find something you’re in the mood for, so taking away your choice from the equation can make it easier. Even on youtube you have to make decisions, so I still recommend cytu.be. At any given time there are about 50 channels run by individuals who play whatever they want, from youtube videos to feature films to live news coverage. The most important site I use for keeping track of TV is obviously airdates.tv.

I don’t really have much to say here. It’s VERY unlikely that anyone is deficient in Stories. They’re too addictive, easy to consume, and socially acceptable. This whole piece is really explaining how I personally live happily as a NEET. I know that if I suddenly lost access to entertainment, I would hate my life. And getting a job would not help matters. Btw, if you shame others for enjoying themselves with anime or anything else, you must kill yourself in order to remain ideologically consistent.

Drugs

This is by far the most controversial facet of the 8fold path. Am I saying the only way to be happy as a NEET is to be constantly out of your mind on drugs? No. I'm saying that healthy people, NEET or not, use drugs regularly. Better living through chemistry, as they say. I don't just mean illegal drugs. I'm talking about caffeinated tea and nootropics too. Drugs are a tricky thing to define. Is chocolate a drug? What about something dangerously addictive like McDonalds? For that matter, what about mind-altering chemicals like SSRIs? My definition isn't perfect, but generally I view drugs as any psychoactive substance that is meant to be physically consumed, yet lacks nutritional value.

Humans evolved to get high. Like with Play and Stories, there is not a culture on this planet that does not consume any psychoactive substances. Even Mormons have relaxed their hard anti-drug stance (presumably because they got tired of hiding it). Literally one of the most antidrug organizations out there, Alcoholics Anonymous, encourages the use of the deadliest drug around: tobacco. Normalfags and wagecucks seem to be under the impression that one must suffer to "earn" the freedom to down a 40 or blaze up 420. Yet they start the day with a pot of caffeine and a few pills of amphetamine.

Maybe you don't feel like drugs are for you, or maybe you feel like you're too weak to handle them. That's usually a sign that you're either doing the wrong drugs, you're around the wrong people, or that you have deep personal issues you have to figure out. You should never be afraid of taking a psychedelic trip because you're afraid of what you'll find in the deepest recesses of your own mind.

Since I wrote the original 8fold Path, shrooms have been legalized and the research touting their antidepressive properties has gone mainstream. Turns out the Roganites were right all along: shrooms are one of the best treatments for depression. Apparently ketamine functions well in this regard too. It doesn't matter what century it is, or whether you're talking about eastern or western medicine. All medical professionals recommend that you do SOME drugs (albeit usually the ones they are selling). And that's putting aside how much they aid in socialization.

"I hate to advocate drugs, degeneracy, & discord to anyone, but they've always benefited me."

DRUGS ARE COOL!

YOU NEED DRUGS TO...

- BE POPULAR
- ENJOY MUSIC
- FEEL GREAT
- HAVE LOTS OF FUN
- BE COOL
- HAVE MORE ENERGY
- BE MORE CREATIVE
- ENLARGE YOUR EMOTIONAL PALETTE
- GET INCREDIBLE INSIGHTS
- LAUGH REALLY HARD
- SEE REALLY FREAKY LIGHTS AND COLORS
- BE HILARIOUS
- MAKE YOU ENJOY SEX MORE
- HAVE EVEN MORE FUN
- BE JUST LIKE YOUR ROCK STAR HEROES

NEET Poetry

excerpts from Tony Wilder's Goose Hymns, Craic Overdose, & Fever Dreams for the Now Age

---"Gits Tae Fuck"---

The world has broken me and killed my spirit and you monkeys cheer and clap like its a good thing
"One of us!", "One of us!", they shout
Everything in life is reducible to work/having a job and generally conforming to the status quo
Prison planet - I hate everyape alive and dead apes too

---"Cthulhu's Rise To Stardom"---

Penny-Farthing bicycle collection posted to Etsy $666.00 OBO
UBI and free dakimakuras for everyone!!!
Makin' slams for lunch doin' a prison bulk ALL NATTY
The most domesticated human of them all
LARP'ing as a freethinker
Kitty got claws/Kitty been spayed and de-clawed
Is endurance of hardship a sign of strength, or a sign of profound weakness? Strength, in my opinion.
Faux-Buddhist New Age quackery for rich White women and Nintendo Switch owner boyfriends
Hold Jamal & Schlomo's hand while they tag team your crown chakra

---"Party Animal Last Gasp 2186 A.D."---

Queen of Hearts/King of Diamonds - NEET Paradise/Hell of my own making
Cultural indoctrination MK-STYLE - Prayin' 2 St. Jude - Earth is Hell enough
A gradual deterioration of the spirit eats at me, wears me down
Tuning out God's synchronicity and becoming a demon - The obscene can be divinely inspired too, ya know

---"Hideo Kojima's Masterpiece"---

Television, movies, computers, phones; the version of reality that is presented on-screen differs wildly from the reality we live in.
We tell kids that feel-good Disney reality bullshit then get surprised when they're a parasitic loser.
We'd be better off showing 'em cheetahs chasing gazelles videos for 16 hours a day.
This is Total Information Control. Metal Gear Solid 2 Cutscene. Hell.

Who needs agents in the field when the average brainwashed American will do the Fed's work for you?

(: of the Middle East smile
Watch MSNBC until you get no more of the Middle East smile
Tell your teddy bear all about what McGill University did to you
Who needs agents in the field when the average brainwashed American will do the Fed's work for you?
Adam + Eve ate that apple first thing they did was put clothes on. Nudism is the way
The fuckin' country looks like South Africa now, what're you fatasses waiting for? Somalia?
Hugging my boyfriend while I listen to Deerhunter and cry LMAO #TrapGoals

---"Rat Utopia Final Boss"---

---"Xxx_Going_Galt_420_xxx"---

Smokest thou hemp and do what thou wilt
This isn't how I planned it but then again I never planned it
Euthanasia for weak stomach pain
4 tokens off the gravity bong then let's sit down and write a new Constitution
Don't be reliant on others for anything, especially happiness

---"Kali Yuga"---

There is no group of people on this earth that'll sympathize with hermits/reclusive men
Strive for excellence and mastery over the Self
Life is but a shadow - All we are is a buncha hairless apes torturing each other 24/7 impending doom feels - Our lives are too comfortable and it has made us weak
Some kinda misguided cultural milieu - 2 blackpilled 4 this world

---"One Well-Placed EMP Burst" ---
If only the child soldiers of Kony 2012 were alive to read the VICE headlines of 2020

Fastest way to spot a faggot numale: he uses the word "toxic"
Nostalgia for a time I never knew - Observer to my own demise
Being a long-term hermit gives you a unique perspective on things; on life, on everything
This is the part of the Old Testament where God should wipe off the board and start fresh

---"Ascension" ---

My beauty in isolation
Soft underbelly of greed and excess
You work your fingers to the bone we turn to dust
I weep and cry out for companions that will never materialize
I don't trust anyone that's not depressed by the state of the world
My beauty in solitude
The hermit's slumber as the world dies

---"Ketamine In Bristol"---

Use worldly things to reach otherworldly insight - Throw a safety blanket over the world
Go outside in clean, one color, gender-neutral clothing and scowl always
Poetry is trash I'd be better off with a
KFC bucket and a bottle of vodka
The worst thing we can do is neglect
our natural gifts and abilities
Wither away in silence versus the self-improvement cope
You either go with the flow or you drown against the current

---"INTJ SysAdmin God" ---

Black background and green text master race
fuck youtube comments fuck text formatting
fuck AOL
Flex my oldfag muscle a little bit... u mirin'
(my Linux distro) brah?
Manjaro Linux come to Brazil
Your lonely uncle browsing eepsites and texting you everytime CVS gets data breach'd
Just run Linux Mint Cinnamon on it and be done with it lad

---"Party Animal Last Gasp 2186 A.D." ---
Queen of Hearts/King of Diamonds - NEET Paradise/Hell of my own making
Cultural indoctrination MK-STYLE - Prayin' 2 St. Jude - Earth is Hell enough
A gradual deterioration of the spirit eats at me, wears me down
Tuning out God's synchronicity and becoming a demon - The obscene can be divinely inspired too, ya know

---"Cum-Splattered Ryuko Matoi Figurine, Mountain Dew and Doritos Limited Edition Run" ---

Scared of silence and living in a zoo
Anti-social behavior frightening the herd
I'm a dolphin laughing everytime the sonar malfunctions
Mindfuckers vs. the mindfuck-ees flashes the steel
I swear to God if I read or hear the word problematic one more time
NEETbox in hand
Life in the Promised Land
I'll pretend to be Moses 4 xtra stimmy
Disregarded the whores, went schizo, wrote the book on it
Acquired the bennies, let the mask slip
I got neckbeard cred 'N hatred of man
I got nuthin' but time, friend...

Why ChristCuckery is Anathema for Men & NEETs

Ok, this one's really short and simple, and it revolves around Master and Slave morality.

A ChristCuck is a golem. A preprogrammed automata. They need very specific instructions for everything as they cannot function autonomously. It starts with the Ten Commandments, where three of them are just "I am a selfish bitch - Yahweh" phrased in different ways. The other seven only are there because ChristCucks are so subhuman and immoral they cannot even understand the most basic elements of a stable society, such as not cucking or murdering your neighbor, without specific orders.

ChristCuckery is the most "I was just following ze orders" religion among religions that are all some degree of "I was just following ze orders". At least the other Abrahamics, like Islam and Judaism are good at fighting and subverting, respectively. There is no respect in being a bitch, which is why everyone hates ChristCucks including ChristCucks, and they get off on being hated because they have a subversive martyr complex. Look at history. The ChristCucks baited the Romans into killing them so they'd seem like persecuted heroes.

Now, consider your typical NEET. He's pretty much the exact opposite of this. Disengaging from society naturally involves ignoring its commands, and forsaking things like discretionary income in exchange for freedom and sovereignty. Even if you well optimized things, using crypto as passive income etc, chances are your absolute income is still low, so you must not be materialistic. There are a lot of other things you "lose", such as a pseudo-social-life at work or experience navigating bureaucracy, but those are all instances of the trash taking itself out, so I don't consider those losses.

Being a proud NEET requires self actualization. In Current Year society, how can you be bored if you're alone in your room? Answer: By not having an internet connection, as that's where the real world can be found. But if you can't self actualize, you can't make your own entertainment. Either literally as a content creator in my case, or just getting into some video games/anime/books/etc made by others (PS: Read Anomie and Animosity, they are free books about society collapsing because men disengaged from it and are living their real lives elsewhere while gatekeeping out NPCs, oh and Antipode is coming soon).

So you see, the mentalities are diametrically opposed. One follows orders from others, and one makes their own orders and then follows them. The Jewish demon Yahweh would command you into Jewish slavery through WageCucking. The CHAD NEET will just say no.

On the Basedness of Online Grocery Shopping

An essay on why you should pay someone to go grocery shopping for you, by Shinichi Haku.

Anyways, what online grocery shopping does for you is let you never leave your house unless you actually want to leave. While online shopping in general was around for quite a while, it didn't cover most food items. But online grocery shopping goes beyond this merely replacing in store visits as the online shopping is a superior alternative even if, for some reason you were not averse to dealing with NPCs. Here are a few reasons why:

- 1: You make roastie WageCucks your literal servant class, leaving your tendies at the door. That alone would be reason enough.
- 2: At 8 dollars a month, it is cheaper than visiting the store yourself.
- 3: If absolutely anything goes wrong with the order, such as the delivery driver not following your instructions exactly, you get the item for free.
- 4: Sometimes they prove diversity is their strength and refund you for random shit without even being asked and without any problem occurring. Thanks for the free tendies!
- 5: Their item replacement selection options are very pro consumer if used right. For example, you can order cheap bread and select the substitute as expensive bread... they will still charge you as though it were the cheap bread even if you get the higher value item.
- 6: Trolling WageCucks by making them deliver your items one at a time. It's not a coincidence these drivers are like 90% female, as men are checking out of soyciety.
- 7: No judgment. If you order some obviously skewed order, like 50 dollars of nothing but soda, chips, cookies, etc, there's no bullshit arguments and you need not even see the WageCuck delivering it, you just get what you want.

So this is perhaps the most useful thing for a NEET. Honestly it is useful for anyone, but oversoycialized golems actually like going out and dealing with people (reeeeeeeeeeee!) so they don't utilize it. There wasn't much demand for it until recently because of the holocoof. But it's good. In fact, online grocery shopping is so good that it is explicitly being nerfed in several ways, all so they can try justifying their fucking existence with physical stores.

One relatively recent addition is item lockouts. Managers at major stores like Amazon and Walmart can select specific items and implement zip code based, regional, or national lockouts on online orders... it will still be in the store, but you can't select it for delivery and if you try it will say shipment might be restricted to [Your address]. There is no might about it.

Another is the removal of discounts. Granted, most of them already removed discounts, but now many of the ones that didn't now are removing discounts. Effectively, you pay a lot more for the online order. But is it worth dealing with people and their bullshit, especially during COVID insanity?

NEET Classifieds

Check out more of Tony Wilder's Poetry at:

<https://www.amazon.com/dp/B08J2R4LD8> --- Reading Ecclesiastes Drunk
<https://www.amazon.com/dp/B08LTQNNW4> --- Goose Hymns
<https://www.amazon.com/dp/B08YJBKRCZ> --- Craic Overdose
<https://www.amazon.com/dp/B09B1QNGR1> --- Fever Dreams for the Now Age

Corporate flew under the radar for a lot of people and I put the blame squarely on Comedy Central. Don't worry, unlike most of Comedy Central's other original shows, this one is actually funny. Despite that, it manages to make pointed social commentary on the modern state of work and life in general. It accurately conveys the dystopian nature of the modern workplace.

CORPORATE COMEDY

hmmmmmm MYSTERIOUS:
https://www.washingtonpost.com/business/a-mysteriously-large-chunk-of-gen-z-isnt-working/2022/03/11/258e9478-a137-11ec-9438-255709b6cddc_story.html

Check out Shinichi Haku's novels here:

<https://www.amazon.com/gp/product/B08ZLSTXFM> --- (Phoenix Rising Online Book 1)
<https://www.amazon.com/gp/product/B09M8M59GH> --- Animosity (Phoenix Rising Online Book 2)
<https://www.minds.com/shinichihaku> --- Shinichi's social media

Check the next page for an invitation to a Halloween net-party! We live in a cyberpunk future. Cyberspace is always where the party at.

Since 2017, Gomer Goof as begun to be translated into English. If you stan this NEET-at-heart, give him a read: <https://readcomiconline.li/Comic/Gomer-Goof/>

Me and my bro made this short QRPG game called Magical Thinking:

<https://neetpride.itch.io/magical-thinking>

Gimmicks: AI-generated music, "talk mechanics" that are more intricate than a fucking dialogue tree (UNDERTALE=OVERRATED), copious drug use.

Check out the OST too: <https://soundcloud.com/neetpride/sets/mt-ost>

Ara ara, bitch: <https://fau-naraara.com/>

Big ups to <https://neet.moe/> which is my preferred shitpost hangout space.

Please ban the troonjak spammer, admin!

EXPEDITION TO THE BACKROOMS HALLOWEEN NETPARTY

What: take drugs with strangers on the internet, watch youtube videos about The Backrooms, watch Donnie Darko, host an IRL scavenger hunt (scavhunt deets in thread)

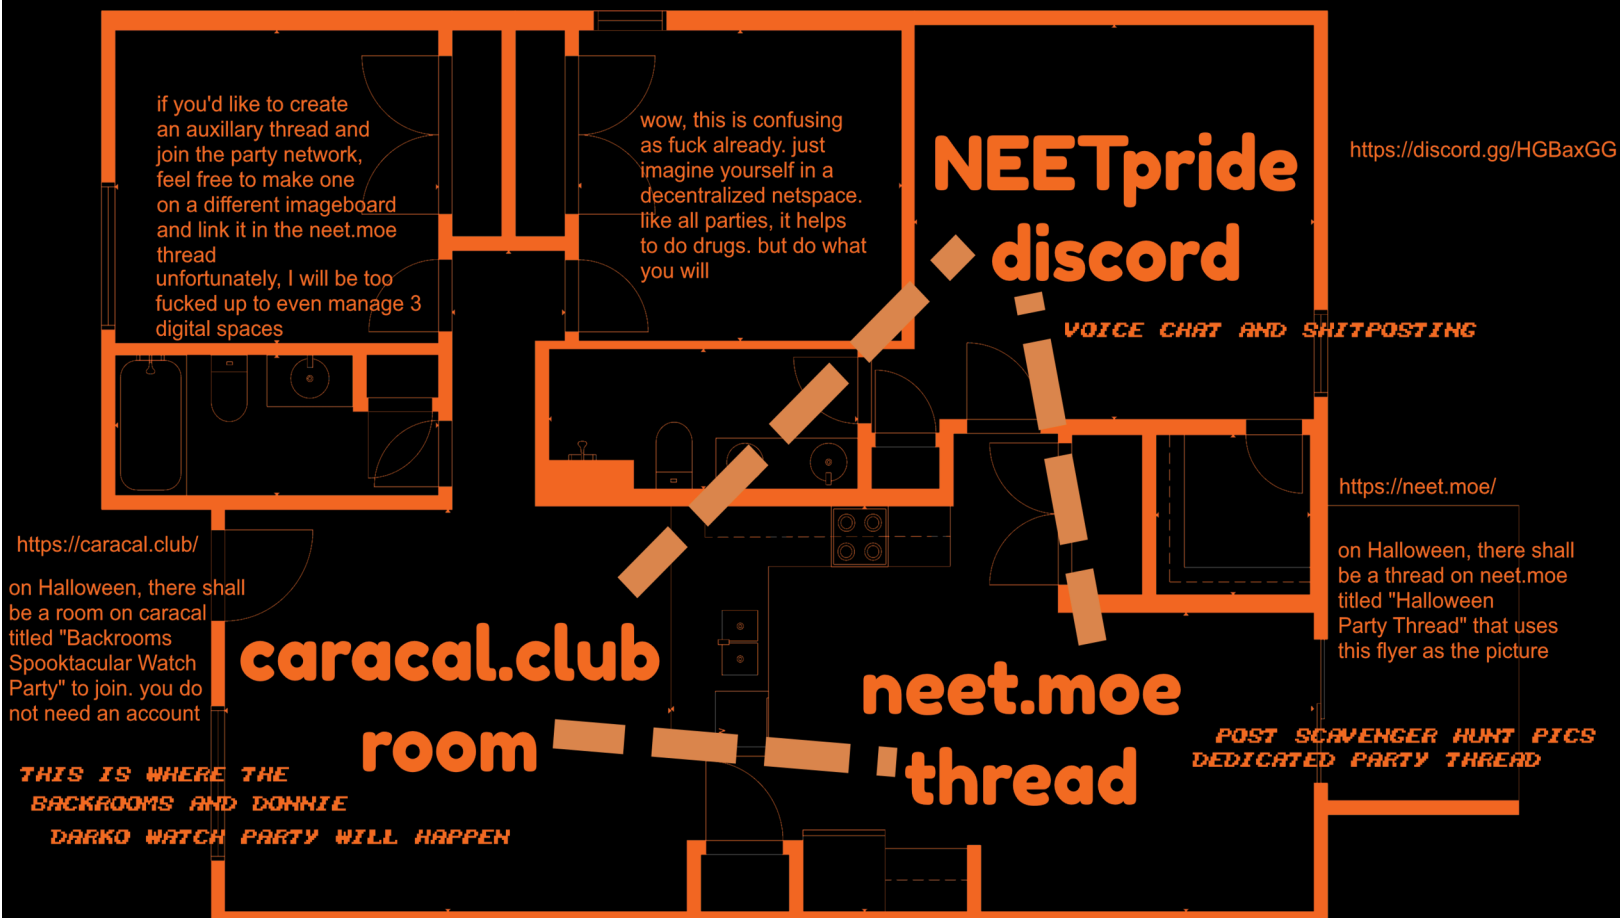

Where: 3 locations in cyberspace, neet.moe, NEETpride discord, and caracal.club

When: Monday night, 10/31/2022
8PM EST to whenever

Who: anyone bored on Halloween

Why: make me trip hard as fuck, noclip into the Backrooms IRL, NEET meet and greet

How: I'm gonna pre-game my mind with lore about the Backrooms, then on Halloween take ~600mg DXM & ~400mg DPH (2 totally legal drugs), watch Backrooms lore and chat, then at some point I'm gonna spin around to potentiate my trip, and hopefully noclip into the Backrooms. I'll provide a full trip report a few days later... if I survive this is a new kind of netparty. it takes place in 3 separate locations simultaneously, each with different primary functions. all you gotta do is show up to any of these places and hang out

Available missions:

Draw a NEET-based 4-Koma

Write an essay explaining why religions should approve of NEETdom

Write an essay explaining why communists should approve of NEETdom

Write a tutorial for brewing dirt-cheap alcohol from apples

Submit something for the NEET Classifieds

Create some NEET graffiti IRL and share the pic

Shill the NEETzine on your socials

Like what you see? Think something is missing?

Be the change you want to see!

Leave your feedback with this poll!

<https://discord.gg/kbeHUcYfWU>

<https://neetpride.wordpress.com/contact> View the poll results here.

I'M NOT EVEN PROCRASTINATING
ANYMORE
I'M STRAIGHT UP
NOT WORKING

